

Dare I spend time with you?

By Glenn Currier

Dare I spend my time with you puncture my soul with your deep breath feel the pain in your feet walking the Earth and the universe with such love?

Dare I spend time with you and risk falling into the abyss of deep, sad blue and losing my self in that fall all with the chance that I will become who I was meant to be from the start or the sperm reaching the ovum?

Dare I spend time with you laying myself out on the expanse of your skin feeling its coarse surface learning its beautiful depths?

May I have the courage to take this small leap to find you in the saddest and most joyful places.
If I dare to spend time with you I will find myself in the strong grasp of your immense reach.
