

Falling in Love

By Glenn Currier

She sees him walking toward her their eyes lock
a rush of excitement
a tingling
a warmth suffuses their bodies.
They stay up til 3 talking and kissing discovering, laughing, connecting.
This is how it begins.
But it blossoms
as they shed reluctance lower defenses
let go
fall
in love.

This is what I want
I crave
for us.
Every bit of it.
Every increment
making me breathless
building building
into something special.
I want you
I want us to be an us.
I want a blossoming
of passion
I want to have you
I yearn for our union.

I feel it beginning
It is not that rush
nor love at first sight but I am starting to let go to shed my hoodie,
my vest, my armor
and piece by piece
off with my outer wear
until I stand before you unprotected
defenseless
empty.
May I be shameless
in your presence
may I be blameless
and may we be pure
together.

May I tumble into you
and fall in Love.